

My project, “Artisanal House,” aims to bring the richness of Thai silk production to the forefront through an immersive space in central Surin. This center will feature an informative museum, archives, and a silk workshop, allowing visitors to experience each step of the silk-making process and observe the landscape of nearby mulberry fields. Collaborating with reactivated airports, the project will support both silk exports and tourism in Surin. The program includes a guided journey through the museum, mulberry plantation, sericulture spaces, and a hands-on silk weaving workshop, culminating in a retail area and access to the airport.
