The project provided both permanent structure and the moveable shading to let the people use the area freely.

Full Project Narrative/Text Description (300 words max.):

Reviving the sense of community and cultural heritage in Lopburi through a revitalized municipal market that serves as a dynamic infrastructure for local merchants and a gathering hub for residents, preserving the traditional spirit of interconnected living in a modern urban landscape. Urban development and modernization have greatly influenced the fabric of communities, often leading to the erosion of traditional markets and social bonds. The original essence of people living together, dependent on shared spaces and mutual support, has faded as modern civilization reshaped the urban landscape. To counter this trend and rejuvenate the cultural heritage of Lopburi, the Market Rewind aims to restore the vitality of the old municipal market, transforming it into a community-centric infrastructure that supports both local commerce and social interactions.

After analyzing the site context, human interaction like talking and mingling between people are the major points that drive the market to be the market. To embrace and retain the sense of the site, providing the facility and tools that support merchants and local people in this area through a form of market infrastructure architecture. Reconstruct the old existing structure of the center of the market warehouse to be one of the hearths of people of Lopburi by using the usual activities to upgrade the quality of life and apply the interaction into the project. The project provided both permanent structure and the moveable shading to let the people use the area freely.
