Studio Brief Title:
A Home is Not a House

Short Project Description (100 words max.):

Our Nest is a treehouse-inspired reunion space designed to bring people together while evoking the comfort and creativity of childhood. It fosters connection through a collaborative building process, echoing the joy of childhood fort-making. Featuring three pod-like spaces for relaxing, eating, and sleeping, the structure invites users to personalize it with their belongings, transforming it into a secondary home filled with shared memories. In today's fast-paced, stressful world, Our Nest provides a safe, nostalgic haven where people can slow down, reconnect, and feel a sense of belonging, reminding us that home is found in shared moments and togetherness.

Full Project Narrative/Text Description (300 words max.):

Our Nest is a reunite space with treehouse-inspired, designed to evoke the comfort, freedom, and creativity of childhood. Inspired by the organic, playful forms of the Bavinger House, it features three pod-like spaces, each with a distinct purpose: relaxing, eating, and sleeping. These pods serve as blank canvases, allowing users to personalize the space by adding their belongings, such as blankets, books, or decorations, making it a deeply personal and meaningful environment.

The project begins with collaboration, inviting users to take over the building together, echoing the joy and teamwork of childhood and personalizing the space, while playfulness and sense of childlikeness is inserted into elements of the house. This act of creation fosters a sense of connection and ownership, transforming the space into more than just a retreat. Over time, as users bring their items and memories into the pods, Our Nest evolves into a secondary home—one that reflects its inhabitants and grows with them.

Our Nest offers a sanctuary for escape and reconnection. The cozy, organic design provides a sense of safety and calm, encouraging users to slow down and embrace a simpler rhythm of life. It blends nostalgia with creativity, bridging the carefree joy of childhood with the comfort of a personalized space.

In a world dominated by stress and routine, Our Nest offers a haven where people can feel free, secure, and connected. It reminds us that home is not defined by walls but by the memories, belongings, and emotions we create within it
